What Are Bots?

The word ‘bot’ is short for robot.

There are many software bots available that are configured to carry out many different types of repetitive tasks on the internet.

Their automated functions are achieved with a speed and consistency that we humans could never match.

Uses are wide ranging. There are bots that automatically scan for bargains on eBay listings. Search-engine spiders index websites. Bots can trade shares or invest in forex markets.

Other bots act as automated online assistants, handle automated voting on Youtube, scrape data from websites, and automatically gamble for their owners. The list goes on.

Those on the dark side use bots for malicious purposes. Harvesting email addresses for spam, spreading viruses, and linking PCs to collectively attack websites by overloading them, are just a few examples of many more uses of harmful bots.

Poker, roulette and Betfair racing bots are very popular.

Betting Bots Can Help You

Our focus here will be on bots for betting on all sports such as horseracing and football on the betting exchanges, with particular emphasis on Betfair – not because it’s necessarily the best but it is the biggest with more users.

The more users there are, the greater the range of markets on offer, and the greater the volatility of those same markets. (It’s the volatility that offers the best price-trading advantages.)

Not surprisingly, therefore, most racing bots are made to work on Betfair only. Some are configured to work on Betdaq only. A few others offer both options.

As Betdaq gains traction and gains more adherents looking for an alternative to Betfair, we can expect more dual-exchange bots.
For example, you might have a relatively successful system that works on race distance, track and number of horses.

According to your system you bet the favourite only if it is in a certain price range at a particular time either before or during the race.

Rather than sit there all day monitoring each race for betting opportunities you can use a bot to do it all for you whilst you get on with your life and do other things.

Enter the appropriate settings into the bot. Run the bot and it will accurately, consistently and tirelessly place the appropriate bets for you on each race that fits the profile you have determined in the settings.

You can then leave the bot running, knowing it will handle the qualifying bets for you whilst you are at work, during your time off work, and even whilst you eat or sleep.

Upsides…

Unlike human punters a betting bot never gets tired. Or suffers doubts and keeps changing its mind.

Because it feels no fear about losing money it never suffers from the ‘second thoughts syndrome’.

Human punters tend to be influenced by price movements near start time. They either become over-confident or lack confidence in their selections. Then they chop and change at the last minute. Sound familiar?

The betting bot won’t do any of that. It is completely unaffected by fatigue, boredom or doubt. That’s because it’s completely free of emotions.

The bot will operate according to configuration instructions given to it in the user settings. In other words, you can control exactly what the bot will do, exactly how it will do it, and exactly when it will do it.

But the settings you specify are crucial, of course. Their accuracy will determine if the bot will operate profitably or not for you.

WARNING: One incorrect setting in your bot and your money could disappear faster than a politician’s promise.
At the risk of stating the obvious you will need to spend enough time reading and understanding the User Guide so as to know exactly what you are doing.

If you don’t know what you are doing then the bot will never meet your expectations.

So RTBM (Read The B Manual) because, if you think about it, the bot can only act on the information you give it.

I know…I know…We don’t like reading manuals and that’s why the video recorder probably never works properly.

An incorrectly configured video won’t lose you money. But an incorrectly configured bot definitely will.

…And Downsides

All that now neatly leads us to looking at some other downsides of running a betting bot.

(What’s that? You thought a bot is going to give you limitless cash cascading from every orifice, without any hazards along the way? If yes, then change your tablets! Life’s not like that…)

In case you missed it the first time: if you don’t configure and set up your bot carefully and accurately, then it will steadily lose your money.

Other occupational hazards for betting bot users include:

- Power outages
- Connection dropouts
- Faulty computers
- …and so on…

Any of those will, of course, prevent or stop the bot from working.

According to Sod’s Law, power or connection cuts usually happen right at the most inconvenient point, that can result in taking a loss.

If you let them, most bots will easily calculate and place bets below the Betfair minimum.

Beware – that violates Betfair user rules

So, if you are using a bot that places bets below the minimum, and you have a betting dispute, then it’s probably better to say nothing to Betfair. Just let it go.

Why? Because the minute you contact them, the consultant will have your account open on the screen with all your below-the-minimum-bets clearly listed. Then, look out -- you’re no longer below their radar.
Some bots will warn you if a bet is below the Betfair minimum. So just check with the bot vendor about this. However, if you are going to take your putting seriously and would like to make a healthy primary or secondary income from betting you're not going to achieve that aim betting less than £2 per bet.

Types of Bots

Bots fall into either of two main groups:

- Transactional Betting Bots
- Non-Transactional Betting Bots

Transactional Betting Bots allow users to place bets, generated by pre-set, user-defined parameters, straight into the betting exchanges. To do this, they use the betting exchanges’ Application Programming Interface (API).

Non-Transactional Betting Bots don’t normally use an API as their main job is to gather, analyse and use information to calculate such things as

- Staking plans’ profit and loss figures
- Cumulative profits
- Long-term return on investment
- …and so on

Within these two groups, bots can be categorised as:

- Trading Bots
- Read-only, Non-Transactional Bots
- Fully automated, Transactional Bots
- Or part of a smaller, restricted sub-category for mobile phones

Let’s look at each in turn.

Trading Bots are used for Betfair price trading, especially during in-play when prices are extremely volatile. It would be impossible to trade manually. The bot can trade for you in micro-seconds. Once again – it will only be as good as the settings you specify.

Such bots are usually semi-automated so you can’t just set’n’forget, and come back hours later to buy the new car.

You’ll need to keep an overall eye on the bot whilst it greens up for a risk-free profit, responds to a stop-loss or target profit trigger, fills or kills a bet, displays advanced graphs, moves up and down a ladder interface.

A couple of examples, Market Monitor and Bet Trader, are classed as full Transactional Betting bots. That’s because they both allow users to bet directly into the betting exchanges via direct API access.

Read-Only, Non-Transactional Bots collect and analyse Betfair data without ever placing bets.

Some can pop up alerts or various market indicators. Others are basically calculators to help you spot betting opportunities.

They can save and store betting history, price movements and other useful data for subsequent retrieval and display to spot trends and plan future strategies.

As an example, The Staking Machine is classed as a Non-Transactional Betting bot because

Fully Automated, Transactional Bots need carefully considered, one-time setup.

The bot then works automatically to identify selections either

- pre-defined manually
- or, according to a pre-defined formula

Such bots commonly carry out a nominated betting system, or bet according to a particular staking plan. Two examples (of several) are The Grey Horse Bot and BetBotPro.

Some tipping services provide a bot to download and bet on their selections for the day.

Some Betfair, or web bots, run on a private server. They often offer a web interface so you can access the bot from wherever and whenever you like on any PC with an internet connection. Ideal for betting on holiday or when travelling.

Because it’s running on a private server, the bot can place your bets even when your own PC is off. That is an excellent way to save on your ever-increasing electricity bill, of course.

Betfair Bots For Mobiles have restricted features when compared with their desktop cousins, but are useful when away from your computer.

Android users could take a look at: http://code.google.com/p/betonthemove iPhone users could take a look at Minibet: http://app.downloadatoz.com/iphone-mini-bet-tools/

Have a quick word with Google and you’ll find others.
Factors To Consider

Betting bots vary considerably in price and complexity. Some are free. Some are relatively cheap. Some require you pay a monthly subscription.

Take advantage of trials to compare features. After all, it’s your money so why spend more than you might need to?

Are you buying the bot outright? Or are you simply buying a monthly, renewable subscription?

Does the bot offer a fully-functioning trial period? It should. Or does it offer a ‘crippled’ trial? Or, even worse, no trial at all?

You might decide to pass by if it offers no trial. What are they trying to hide? Poor performance? Or is an indication of potentially poor customer service…or of greed…or…

Buying a bot is a bit like buying underwear, where it’s definitely not a case of one size fits all. You must find one that fits you.

That means carefully taking into account exactly what you want the bot to do. So time spent planning your campaign won’t be wasted.

If it’s a relatively simple system -- as we saw in our earlier example about the favourite -- then you won’t need a bot with multiple bells’n’whistles.

On the other hand, the more complicated your system/betting activities are then the more-functions and settings your bot will need to offer.

Multi-Licence: For those who work full-time, it could be a good idea to look for a bot with a licence to install on your other computer for no extra cost. These days many folk have a portable PC as well, so they can use the on holiday or perhaps set it running whilst at work.

Look for upgrade information. Are you eligible for free upgrades, or will you be expected to pay for each upgrade? And if you are expected to pay then will that be the full price? Or will you get a decent discount for being an existing customer?

Online support that responds to your queries promptly and efficiently is vital. So test the quality of the support before you buy with a question or two.

Depending on your strategies and systems look for useful ‘extras’ such as:

- Offering both back and laying options
- Offering trading functions
- Offering in-built staking plans
- Offering a dutch-book staking option
What Essential Features and Functions?

Your intended bot should offer most, if not all of the following 5 very basic, minimum features and functions:

1. Expect to find easy to follow set up and instructions in a well written, illustrated User Guide and/or video(s) tutorial(s). The Guide should be easy-to-read on-screen, with plenty of white space to break up the text.

2. A risk-free, test and/or simulation mode will help check if the bot will actually do what you want it to do or not.

If there is no test mode then don’t buy it. There are other fish in the sea.

3. There must be provision for user-defined stop loss and profit triggers. Running a bot without either of these is a recipe for disaster because the bot is free to drain your account without any automatic restraints in place.

4. Expect to find a choice of single or multiple runners per race.

5. The bot should export records of bets (with other useful data) in an easily read format such as text or spreadsheet format.

Formal approval for the bot to use Betfair’s API (Application Programming Interface) is a bonus but is not strictly necessary.

Betsender’s Mike Smith very promptly emailed a very helpful clarification and explanation about API approval, in response to a general query. (A prompt, helpful reply to a potential customer is always a good sign of a vendor interested in providing a good service.)

He wrote:

“The only advantage of being approved is that software will be listed in Betfair directory.

Also you can make two times more data requests without being charged, but it is really needed only for trading software like BetAngel where more requests means better speed.

For our purpose speed is not significant and we need only 2-3 data requests per second. From other sides it does not impact on functionality.”

Betfair’s API

All Betfair bots use either Betfair API (free or commercial) or screen scraping.
Free API is free of costs but limited to number of requests you can send to Betfair.

Many Betfair bots use commercial API. It’s subscription based, and the vendor has to pay monthly subscription fee £200-£250. Bear in mind that cost is, of course, taken into account in the bot’s purchase price.

Commercial API allows virtually unlimited number of requests per second. But naturally, too many requests according to Betfair’s terms will incur transaction and data charges. No such thing as a free lunch.

If you’re unsure about the status of the bot’s API then contact the vendor.

Always read the fine print. (Yes, it’s fine because ‘they’ don’t ever want you to read it!)

Now we’ll move on to an overview of some of the leading betting bots on the market. We have provided you with detailed information about each one, which will save the masses of time and help you to compare the features and functionality of each bot all in one place making it much easier.

There are also lots of free trials available and some exclusive betting books, including a very profitable lay system to download (Refer to page 38 for more details)

BetTrader [Two subscription options] [Transactional Bot]

Includes a free 7 day trial

To use all the features, you can purchase:

- a recurring subscription for constant access
- you can purchase usage by-the-day.. in packs of 3, 10 or 30 days. These are valid for use one at a time, any time in the six months after you purchase them.
- Download BetTrader FREE and use it for a full 7-Days (Trial of full version)

Either choice gives part time traders flexibility to use the very fast Turbo Mode especially suited to fast, volatile markets (rather than the slower Standard Mode) whenever it suits.

BetTrader Evolution displays live, Betfair prices updating in a choice of intuitive, feature-packed trading interfaces offering very fast bet submission and a full range of trading tools.

The recently added Sports Mode is designed specifically for non horse racing markets.

You can trade efficiently across a set of markets on the one screen with live updates.

NB: The free Standard Mode lets you trade using the ladder grid and all the bet placement tools.

In this mode, Market Prices update once every five seconds, which is suitable for betting and laying most markets and for trading on slower moving games.

This product certainly meets our list of minimum requirements of:

- Good Video/User Guide
- Test mode
- Stop loss/target triggers
- Single/multiple runners
- Export records

…with much more besides

One notable feature highlight is that BetTrader Evolution is the first mainstream Betfair API Solution which allows you to trade on Betfair in training mode.

This means that you can learn to trade on Betfair or test out a new system without any risk.
The application uses the live Betfair data which means that you can get a feel for the market without putting any cash at risk.

By dipping into the very comprehensive and well set out User Guide you will gain an overview of the program’s many other powerful features

GreyHorseBot V4.2 [Monthly Subscription]
[Transactional Bot]

The first month's subscription to the Grey Horse bot is £17 (around 55p a day) for a trial.

Thereafter it's £27 every 30 days for as long as you subscribe.

According to site information, subscribers are apparently entitled to, and will receive, regular updates to the Grey Horse Bot or manual.

As one of the first bots in 2006 GHB has evolved into a very feature-rich and advanced, automated betting bot for Betfair and Betdaq.

It also offers manual mode, of course.

This is definitely not a package for beginners. There are cheaper options such as: LayBotPro and Betsender which both have plenty of features to get your feet comfortably wet whilst you gain knowledge and experience.

But it's ideal for experienced and professional users who want a wide range of betting options and tweaks, and are happy to pay for them.

The Runner's bar lengthens to the right as its Market Price drops. It shortens as the Runner’s price rises.

The Graph is clickable, with one Mouse Button submitting Back Bets, and the other submitting Lays (You select which Mouse Button is ‘Back’ and which is ‘Lay’).

The Scheduled Horse Racing Mode, the Defaults Tab looks like this:

The Staking Machine [Two, one-off fee options] [Non- Transactional Bot]

The Staking Machine (TSM) is an advanced system analysis and bet tracking tool. With it, you track your betting systems and selection methods, to see which staking plan of the 39 available would be the most suitable and most profitable.

The latest version of The Staking Machine now ties in directly with the low-cost Betting Assistant trading application from Gruss Software.

This enables you to automatically back or lay your selections according to any of the supported staking plans in TSM.

TSM meets our list of minimum requirements of:

- Good Video/User Guide
- Test mode
- Single/multiple runners
- Export records

…with much more besides

Here is a summary of some Features and Functions offered:

- A BIG PLUS - Purchase entitles you to 2 licenses of TSM so that you could run TSM on a PC and a Laptop.
- Support - Within TSM there is a detailed, richly-illustrated Help File. If you get stuck there is online individual support through the site contact form. A forum covers many topics.
- Staking Plans - In total there are currently 39 staking plans:
  22 Back Staking
  15 Lay Staking Plans
  2 Each Way Staking Plans.
- Data Entry - There are 4 ways to enter data into TSM:
1. Manual Entry of data through the easy to use interface via keyboard.

2. Import bet results from Microsoft Excel and Microsoft Works instantly by simply copy/pasting using the specially designed TSM interface.

3. Load CSV / TEXT files directly into the software. This means TSM is compatible with virtually all spreadsheet programs that you may be using.

4. Load a previously saved TSM file. A TSM file is essentially a text file given the extension TSM to increase security.

- Data Output - There are 3 ways to save data.
  1. Save as a text .TSM file.
  2. Save as a CSV file, easily viewed in any spreadsheet application.
  3. Save as a TXT file.

- Thousands of bets - TSM is limited by your computer memory. Today's computers should be able to handle at least 100,000 bets. (Trial Version Limited to 10).

- Next Stake - If you are going to use TSM on a day to day basis the next Stake is calculated for you automatically in all staking plans.

- Bankruptcy Warning - When back-testing there is simple bankruptcy test warning telling you instantly whether the selected staking plan is actually possible.

- Minimum and Maximum Setting - Minimum and Maximum Stake Settings can be set so that all staking plans can be strictly adhered to.

- Commission Feature - Set the commission level to match your own bookmaker or betting exchange

- Adjust Global Odds - Adjust global odds to reflect SP – Exchange Price differences

- Odds Converter - Allows you to convert decimals into fractions and vice versa

- Random Bet Generator - Generate 4000 Random Bets to simulate your own bet selection systems

- Dutch Calculator - Use Dutch Mode to record or analyse all your dutch bets

- Filter Bets - Filter bets in odds ranges or even add your own text based filters

- Automated Betting - TSM now also includes a simple automated betting add-on that works in conjunction with Gruss Betting Assistant.

- Data Analysis – An in-depth analysis screen compares all staking plans side by side. The analysis includes ROI, Profit, Drawdown, Sequences confidence test, graphs, Odds Frequency and more.

- Test Mode – Data Analysis can be used with the random bet generator to fully test strike rates and staking plans.

- Internet Access is required for automatic updates guaranteed for 1 year.

Unregistered Trial Version Available: Limited to 10 bets at any one time, for no more than 2 betting units.
